INTRODUCTION.

THE Discipline of our Church contemplates the use of two Registers, and defines the manner in which they shall be kept. It is provided that every Society shall have a permanent Register, in which the Secretary of the Church Conference "shall enter in chronological order the full names of all who shall join the Church, with the time and manner of the reception of each, and also shall make a permanent record of all baptisms and marriages within the congregation." It is also provided and expected that "a Church Register shall belong to each pastoral charge, and that it shall be faithfully kept." These Registers may be in the same general form, differing only in size—the smaller being designed for small stations and for separate Societies in a charge, and the larger one for stations with a large membership, or for an entire circuit or mission. Both are intended to be permanent, and to contain not only the list of living members, but of all who have joined the Church, with the date of admission and of their disposal or death. A Register, therefore, should be large enough to last a generation, and should never be revised or rewritten until the book is exhausted. In this respect many of our Registers have not been properly kept. The custom in most places has been to rewrite the list of living members every year or two, and omit entirely the names of all who have died, removed, or in any manner ceased to be members. The old Registers have been thrown away, and as a consequence there is no proof by record of the fact or date of the admission of thousands of our members.

The Register here presented may not contain every feature which some excellent pastors would prefer, but in practical use will be found to embrace every thing absolutely necessary. In this simple form it has the advantage of being easily understood; and it can be furnished about as cheap as a common blank-book of the same size and binding. The first form in the book is a Register of Pastors, and needs no explanation. The second form is a Register of Members, so ruled as to allow space opposite each name for recording the date of admission, the manner of admission, as by certificate or profession, the name of the pastor by whom the member was received, and the date of the death or disposal of the member. This form should be numbered on the left-hand margin, beginning with one and continuing consecutively, so that the last number will show the number of persons who have ever been connected with the charge. The next form is a Death or Disposal Register, which will be easily understood. It should also be numbered from one consecutively, so that the last number, subtracted from the last number of the Register of Members, will always show the number of living members in the Charge, or Society. The blanks for registering Baptisms and Marriages are intended to be used only when our ministers officiate, or the parties are members of our Church or congregation. In case of the baptism of children, the names of parents or sponsors should be inserted.

This form of Church Register has been approved by the Agent and Book Editor, and the copyright belongs to the Publishing House. It has been arranged with the earnest desire that it may prove convenient and useful to the Church.
